EXTRA EDITION

VOL. XXXV.—NO. 40. MIDDLETOWN, DELAWARE, MONDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 6, 1902. PRICE, THREE CENTS

EXTRA

TICKET NAMED

Stidham, Bach, Moore, Jolls and McCormick County Officers.

THE WORKERS ARE PLEASED

Republican primaries were held throughout New Castle County on Saturday when county, hundred and legislative officers were nominated to complete the ticket. For the county and many of the legislative nominations, there were spirited contests between the aspirants, and the utmost activity prevailed throughout the county all the afternoon and until the polls closed. With a much larger vote than that of the Democrats at their primaries was polled, the Republican vote was not so large as had been expected, due to the disagreeable weather. While the primaries passed off without any disorder, it is evident that the result in some districts is not satisfactory to friends of defeated legislative candidates, who propose to make a contest before the Board of Canvass when it meets on Wednesday afternoon. The county and legislative ticket selected on Saturday is as follows:

Sheriff—Emmit F. Stidham of Wilmington.

Register of Wills—Frederick E. Bach of Wilmington.

Recorder of deeds—James S. Moore of Wilmington.

Register in Chancery and Clerk of the Orphans' Court—Joseph C. Jolls of Middletown.

Coroner—Samuel McCormick of Wilmington.

STATE SENATORS

First district—James W. Robertson.

Third district—Christiana and Brandywine hundreds—Thomas J. Stirling.

Fifth district—New Castle, Red Lion, White Clay—Robert McFarlin.

Seventh district—Blackbird and Appoquinimink—Benjamin Lockerman.

REPRESENTATIVES

First district—James Hitchen.

Second district—Erwin F. Phillips.

Third district—John Bancroft.

Fourth district—William Lawton.

Fifth district—Jas. C. Wrightington.

Sixth district (Brandywine hundred)—Abraham L. Tyre.

Seventh district (Christiana hundred)—William R. Flinn.

Eighth district (Mill Creek hundred)—William G. Eastburn.

Ninth district (White Clay Creek hundred) John G. Johnston.

Tenth district (New Castle hundred)—John E. Taylor.

Eleventh district (Pencader hundred)—John W. Dayett.

Twelfth district (Red Lion hundred)—William C. Price.

Thirteenth district (St. Georges hundred)—Leonard V. Aspril, Jr.

Fourteenth district (Appoquinimink hundred)—Wm. A. Money.

Fifteenth district (Blackbird hundred)—Samuel C. Derrickson.

LEVY COURT COMMISSIONER.

Levy Court commissioner (4th district)—Caleb Canby Hopkins.

WILL BE SOME CONTESTS

A cry of fraud has gone up from friends of Mr. Rudolph, defeated candidate for representative in the second district, and from friends of George W. Sparks, defeated candidate for Senator in the northern district, Wilmington. They base principally their suspicions on the returns from the Eleventh primary district, beyond Eleventh street bridge, where big majorities were rolled up, on the face of the figures announced for Robertson and Phillips.

In addition to the contest to be made by George W. Sparks for the Senatorial nomination, Charles E. Sparks, Jr., will contest the nomination of James Hitchen for Representative in the First district. It is understood that the ground for contesting will be irregularity of the count in some of the primary districts. These contests will come before the joint campaign committee, sitting as a Board of Canvass, on Wednesday afternoon.

THE NOMINEES

The Primary Election held on Saturday resulted in the nomination of an exceptionally strong county ticket. In spite of the talk about "combines" the Republican voters made their own selection. At no primary in recent years was there so many "vest pocket" votes cast. Conscientious candidates deliberate ... the nominees is a prominent ...ington and ... will swell ...de, a person his mer...

...tion he became a partner ...his father in the manufacture ...f wagons and agricultural ...lements, and is now in control of the business. ...bout forty-eight years ...f mature experience, ...every qualification for ...he General Assembly, ...rove an honor to his ...if elected.

For Assessor the Republican have chosen Mr. George W. Ingram who is known widely as a successful real estate agent. His business experience has made him an excellent judge of the value of both farming lands and town properties.

Mr. John Cowgill Alston has made such a good record as a Road Commissioner that his fellow Republicans gave him what was practically a unanimous re-nomination and we feel sure of his election.

The other nominee for Road Commissioner, Mr. Robert S. Carpenter, is a well-known farmer near Port Penn. His popularity is well shown by his winning over Mr. Hiriam Pleasanton who had made a good official.

With such a ticket, which in the county is well balanced and acceptable to all and in the hundred is representative of all sections, the Republicans will have every assurance of success. The campaign will be short, as the election is only four weeks off. The last day for registration is Saturday, October 18th and those Republicans who are still unregistered should attend to this duty. We must not take any chances. Every vote must be cast to insure success. And no amount of regret will excuse neglect on the part of the voters to register and vote.

Now, if Fred E. Bach will only hire the Every Evening to immediately set in and abuse him and lie about him till election day his election will be assured.

HON. JOHN W. CAUSEY, PRESIDENT. WM. DENNEY, SEC'Y AND TREAS.

(Signed) ORR, PAINTER & CO.,
Reading Stove Works.
Philadelphia, Sept. 26th, 1902.

About now the small boy is wondering if it wouldn't be a wise move to join Sunday School before Christmas.

Another heavy rain visited this vicinity yesterday and at times the streets ran ankle deep in water. But few persons were out on the street, the greater majority of persons preferring to remain indoors. The congregations at all our churches were small, and those who did attend were compelled to wade in some places as the pavements were submerged in water.

Comrades Charles M. Stanger, Joseph Deakyne, George Echenhofer, Moody Rothwell, John W. Denny, C. J. Lynch and Department Commander of Delaware, L. V. Aspril, Sr., left this morning for Washington, D. C., where they will attend the 36th National Encampment of the G. A. R. which is in session in the Capital City this week. The Delaware deligates have headquarters at 115 Maryland Avenue, and all Delawareans attending the session are invited to make this their headquarters.

Last Thursday night, October 2d, the following chiefs of Seneca Tribe, No. 44, improved Order Red Men, were raised up by Past Sachem Thomas Pyle and W. C. Eliason: Prophet, J. A. Suydam; sachem, H. D. Howell; senior sagamore, C. H. Lockner; junior sagamore, H. M. Daniels; first sannap, J. W. Owens; second sannap, H. C. Eliason; first warrior, J. F. Harris; second, W. H. Dockerty; third, Edward Alexander; fourth, William Carty; first brave, C. N. Dickerson; second, C. W. Flintham; third, O. M. Matthews. Jos. A. Suydam was elected representative to the Great Council to meet in Laurel on the 29th and 30th of October.

Miss Clarissa Richards, of Wilmington, spent Sunday with her parents on East Main street.

Mr. Walter Beaston, of Evansville, Ind., has been spending several days with relatives here.

Mr. Charles Cranner and Miss Anna Sims, of near Chestertown, are guests of Mr. John L. Byron and family.

Mr. Ed. S. Daly advance agent for the Conroy & Mack's Comedians, was in town to-day, hustling in the interest of his company.

Miss Susie Appleby, of Christiana, has resumed her duties as teacher of Brown Cottage school. Miss Ethel Rowe has been substituting in the absence of Miss Appleby.

SALEM OPERA HOUSE

A house packed to the doors greeted the popular comedians, Conroy & Mack, and their clever company, Saturday night. "The dangers of New York" was their opening bill and it went with a vim and dash and kept the audience constantly laughing and applauding. It is one of the best comedy dramas ever produced at popular prices. The company this season is the best ever seen here in repertoire. Every member is an artist. The specialties are all first class, they are deserving of a week of packed houses which always greet Conroy and Mack.

Last night they were again greeted by another crowded house when they produced the comedy war drama. "The Daughter of Cuba." This play has a strong hold on the public as it went even better than ever.—Salem, N. J., South Jerseyman.

Conroy, Mack's Comedians will appear at the Middletown Opera House three nights commencing Monday October 13th.

J. P. NIELDS NAMED,

John P. Nields has been appointed United States district attorney for this district during the vacancy in the office and it is believed that he will be named by President Roosevelt to succeed William Michael Byrne, who has resigned. The temporary appointment of Mr. Nields was made by Judge Edward G. Bradford, who under the law, has the right to make a temporary appointment. Mr. Nields was at once sworn into his office in the presence of the court officers.

Mr. Nields is 33 years old and a son of Colonel Benjamin Nields. He was educated at the Friends' School and at Harvard Law School. He was admitted to the bar in 1892 and at once took a prominent position as a lawyer. He has always been an active Republican.

Mr. Nields was recommended for the position of district attorney by a majority of the members of the Kent county bar and also of the New Castle county bar. He is an able lawyer, has had much experience and will no doubt make an excellent official.—Morning News.

Fall Clothes

You are glad, of course, to pay the cost of good cloth and making; for you know that they will earn every cent in wear alone—not to mention the satisfaction that you get from being well-dressed.

We have not the only good clothes in Philadelphia; but there are particular reasons why we can and do sell good clothes for less than anybody else.

It is an old saying that if you want to get a thing well done you have got to do it yourself. Of course, we can't personally make every one of the thousands upon thousands of suits and overcoats that we make; but we do watch every step of the making, we know how everything is going to be done, and we examine everything before we put it on sale. We know what the people of Philadelphia and 'round-about want, and we see that you get it.

The only way to know that is to have your own factory, and do your own work.

Now as to Cost. Our factory exists only for the benefit of our store. It makes no money; it delivers the goods to the store at cost, and the store puts upon that cost a fair, reasonable profit for selling. We skip altogether the manufacturer's profit, and our selling profit, because our business is so large, is very low.

This is why we can sell a good, well made, all wool suit for $8.50 and overcoat for $6.50. There may be, elsewhere in Philadelphia, as good suits as our $18 and $20 suits, but they are not $18 and $20.

. . . For the Last Time . . .

BY JUDITH SPENCER.

"FOR the last time!" Geoffrey said to himself, as with varying emotions he stepped into the phaeton and seated himself beside the smiling girl who was to drive him to the station for the early morning train. And he was simply echoing her words of the night before.

"All ready, Alice!" he said lightly. So Alice flicked the pony with her whip and they were on their way.

It was a glorious summer morning and Geoffrey and Alice apparently enjoyed the drive—even though the conditions now were irrevocably changed. Yesterday afternoon she had met him at the train and they had driven back together an engaged pair. But since then their engagement had been ended by mutual consent, and this morning found them merely friends!

Geoffrey Maitland and Alice Wright had known each other all their lives, and had been engaged to one another—off and on—for years.

Their first engagement, while he was still in college and she just out of school, was broken by Alice in a fit of childish jealousy because he had gone on a picnic and had had a good time with the other girls, though she had been unexpectedly kept at home. But after a few weeks' interval and a due show of penitence on his part, she had forgiven him and taken him back into favor.

The next break occurred soon after Geoffrey's graduation. His father had set him up in business and he wanted to be married at once. But Alice had set her heart upon spending the summer abroad, and when Geoffrey unreasonably declared she must marry him now or never, Alice returned her ring.

But the summer did not prove as pleasant as she had anticipated, and she was honestly glad to see Geoffrey waiting on the dock when the vessel reached its New York pier. He had a big bunch of roses for her—and when she discovered her engagement ring tied clumsily among the stems she laughed and blushed and slipped it on again.

That had occurred three years before the present time, and since then Geoffrey had had the grace to be patient, to say the least.

Indeed, he could not well be otherwise than patient, for his first business venture had not been a success and soon he found himself in no position to marry.

Fortunately, the failure which had at one time seemed inevitable had been averted, and presently the tide of his fortune turned.

But when Geoffrey was once more in a position to think of marriage he had made the startling discovery that during all this time his tastes had been developing in one direction and Alice's in quite another, and that now they were no longer as congenial as they had been.

He was a born athlete, a lover of all outdoor sports, and just at present golf engrossed most of his leisure time. But Alice cared nothing for sports of any kind, and she was so entirely wrapped up in her Working Girls' Vacation Clubs and College Settlements and all sorts of charitable schemes that Geoffrey was bored to death in hearing of them.

Who possibly could have foreseen that such a pretty and attractive girl as Alice would all of a sudden have taken such a serious turn.

Geoffrey had thought very often about all this lately, and sometimes had wondered if it would not be better for them both to separate in time, rather than to marry and go on growing apart and be miserable for life. It had been the subject uppermost in his mind when he had arrived the afternoon before, and it had been a relief as well as a surprise to him when Alice had frankly broached the subject.

They talked it all over together then, reasonably discussing their varying tastes, their chances for future unhappiness, and in conclusion had calmly agreed that it would be better—infinitely better—to put an end to the engagement now, with no feeling but one of perfect friendliness and goodwill on either side.

"But we must remember," Alice had added with a sudden anxious puckering of her brows, "that this decision is final. Our engagement has been off and on so many times that even the possibility of another change would be to introduce an element of humor, to which I seriously object. We have carefully considered everything now and have arrived at this decision—for the last time." And Geoffrey had given his assent.

The only thing he had felt really uncomfortable about was that Alice had insisted upon giving back her ring. He wanted her to keep it "for friendship's sake," but she had positively refused.

"No, Geoffrey," she said, "it is my dearest wish that you should soon make another and a happier choice, and it will be a satisfaction to me to feel that your wife—though she may not know of my existence—will wear and prize this beautiful pure gem. As for myself," she added, "you know I am not fond of jewelry, and I should never wear it now that its significance is gone."

"And you, too, will soon make another and a happier choice, I hope," he had said to her afterwards.

But Alice had smilingly replied "This is possible, though hardly probable. I intend to devote myself entirely to trying to help and to improve the condition of these poor, ignorant working girls who interest me so deeply. That is to be my life work, and I shall hardly find time or inclination to think of anything else.

And now the moment for their parting had come. The train was at the station, and Geoffrey, who had been standing by the phaeton chatting with Alice, extended his hand and said "Good-bye." And as his eyes met hers—so friendly but unembarrassed—he suddenly added almost mechanically, "For the last time!"

"No, don't say that!" Alice said hastily. 'My friends are always welcome! Run down any time—if you can stand the chance of seeing half a dozen working girls enjoying their vacation, for I expect to keep the house full of them all summer."

A word of thanks as he lifted his hat, then he jumped aboard the already moving train and soon settled himself for the hour's ride back to town.

Geoffrey had been in his office less than an hour when the door burst open and Dick Williams, who lived in the little town from which Geoffrey had just come, came hurrying in. He was evidently very much excited.

"Say, old man, you haven't heard anything yet, have you?" Williams questioned breathlessly.

"Anything—about what?" Geoffrey asked calmly.

"Oh, you poor fellow, I see you haven't! How shall I tell you! Maitland, old man, you must brace up and prepare yourself for—the worst."

"Hang it all, what are you driving at?" asked Geoffrey.

"I have just come in from Elmcourt," Williams said significantly.

"Have you?" said Geoffrey pleasantly. "So have I—only I took the 8:10 train."

"You did? I hadn't heard of that—though I remember now they did say she had driven some one over to the station and was on her way home. It must have happened almost directly afterwards——"

"She?" cried Geoffrey, now beginning to feel a strange alarm. "What has happened? Tell me quick——"

"The very worst; prepare yourself, my dear fellow! It was over instantly—she was killed."

"Who?" grasped Geoffrey in a strange voice, grasping at the frail straw of some possible mistake.

"Your own Miss Wright," said Williams pityingly. "I knew you'd be dreadfully cut up, you were so fond of one another and had been engaged so long!"

The little ring in Geoffrey's breast pocket seemed suddenly to pierce through him like a knife. Oh, that it had never left her hand!

"What happened?" he said again hoarsely.

"She was driving home, they told me, and on the road she was overtaken by one of those infernal locomobiles. Her horse took fright and bolted, she was thrown out—neck broken—picked up—dead!"

Geoffrey sprang up and the expression on his face made the other man suddenly fear that he was going mad. He stood staring at the office clock.

"If you want to go out there on the noon train I'll arrange to go with you," Williams said kindly.

"I'm going—on the 10:35"

"But, my dear fellow, you can't possibly—you've only seven minutes——"

He ended abruptly when he found himself talking to the empty air, for Geoffrey had seized his hat and was gone.

Out into the crowded street rushed Geoffrey, and never in old college days when he was in training did he run as he ran now. Broadway was at its worst—a confusion of rapidly moving cars, carts and carriages—but Geoffrey stopped for none of them. He dashed under the heads of horses and ran between cable cars, escaping so narrowly that the gripmen yelled at him in a sudden chill, but he plunged on and gained the opposite side unscathed.

Some one humorously raised the cry "Stop thief!" but no one attempted to follow, and none could have caught or held him had they tried. On and on he ran until the ferry house was reached, but just the fraction of a minute late!

The gates were already closed and the boat was just starting from the slip. Geoffrey dashed past the man who was closing the wagon entrance and rushed out to the end of the dock.

Two working girls in the waiting-room who—on their way to Miss Wright's—had just lost the boat, took him for a would-be suicide and shrieked aloud.

Geoffrey gathered himself for a spring and shot far out in a wild endeavor yet to catch the boat. But he was breathless now and the space was widening with every instant. He felt himself falling short, but with a desperate effort he clutched at the boat's deck and clung there until two men dragged him up, swearing roundly at him the while.

Panting and overwrought, Geoffrey ventured into neither cabin—who knew who might be there to recognize and speak to him? So he stood in a narrow space between the vehicles, breathing hard, and with his hat pulled over his eyes to hide the slow tears which now and then coursed down his cheeks.

On the train he sought the smoking-car, where he pretended to fall asleep.

He was sorry now that he had jumped so well! If only he had fallen short o the boat altogether and had been drowned before they could get him out of the water—that would have been the most fitting ending! But since he was still alive, if he could only get the ring back upon Alice's poor dead hand before it should be noticed that it was gone, then no one need ever know that even before death came to separate them they had bid one another good-bye—for the last time.

The train stopped at Elmcourt and Geoffrey, more than ever dreading recognition, cast a swift glance about him for some vehicle to carry him to the house.

And there, right before his eyes and just as he had left her not yet four hours ago, he saw Alice in her phaeton!

He thought it some mad delusion of his brain. He passed his hand across his eyes and looked again, but the vision still was there. She was bending forward, looking eagerly for those working girls who had failed to come, and he saw a shade of disappointment overspread her face. Then she spied him, and her expression changed to one of bewilderment and then anxiety.

He staggered forward to the phaeton and grasped her arm. "Alice! is it really you—and are you—alive?"

"Geoffrey! what absurd questions! You certainly are crazy, or you are ill! Come, get right in—everyone is staring at you."

He scrambled into the phaeton, still holding her fast, and Alice drove swiftly up the road.

"What's the matter?" she asked anxiously. "What brings you back this way? I'm sure you must be ill!"

"Williams came to my office and told me you were—dead," Geoffrey said slowly. "Some horrid accident—and I—I came back——"

"Oh!" said Alice, "I begin to understand! Well, what you heard was partly right, only it wasn't I! It happened to Miss White; you didn't know her, a middle-aged woman who lived above us on the hill. Evidently your friend mistook the names, White for Wright. Her horse bolted and—she wasn't much of a driver, poor thing—she turned him against a stone wall and was instantly killed. But—please don't hold my arm so tight, Geoffrey; it hurts, and really I cannot drive."

Then only did he become conscious of the tightness of his grasp upon her, and he released her with a confused apology and a forced effort to laugh.

But instead of laughter came a sudden sob, and burying his face in his hands Geoffrey broke down and wept like a child.

With an exclamation of dismay Alice turned off from the road into a quiet woodland lane.

But after a few moments Geoffrey recovered himself and begged her pardon for the exhibition he had made of himself, adding with a really cheerful grin, "By Jove, did you ever see such a fool as I've been making of myself; but I couldn't help it! Fancy finding you alive and well after I'd been thinking of you as—ugh!"

"And you cared for me—like that!" Alice said, marveling.

"I didn't know it—till I thought tha you were—gone," he admitted ruefully, "And then; well, I simply couldn't stand it; that's all. Alice, it's no use; you must reconsider things a bit. Can't you make up your mind to put up with me? I know you don't think much of me any more, and I don't pretend to care for all those things you're interested in. But then you are so awfully good and patient with all those foolish and ignorant poor people and after all I can't be any more uncongenial to you than they must be—and so—oh, hang it, Alice, can't you be an angel and put up with me again—'until death us do part'—in awful, bitter earnest?"

"But, Geoffrey," said Alice, "you don't seem to remember that last night when we decided to end our engagement we agreed that this was for the last time?" Yet there was a strange little gleam of a smile in her eyes as she said it.

"But that was before you had died and I gone down into hell," Geoffrey said penitently. "And besides, it shall be the very last time it ever is ended, I can promise you that! Alice, here's your ring; let me put it on again. Oh, if you could know the depth of my misery when I thought of you as dead—and your ring in my pocket boring into my heart like a knife! I know you can't care much for such a fellow as I, but you said you probably would never marry any one else and I am just absolutely certain that I can't live without you!"

"You poor, dear boy!" Alice said tenderly, as she held out her hand for him to slip on the sparking ring. "What will you say, then, when I tell you that I love you—more than ever—and the most difficult word I ever spoke was this morning when I bid you 'Good-by!' "

He stared at her incredulously. "But then—I don't understand; why did you"—he stammered.

"Because—well, I really thought that you no longer cared for me," she confessed blushing. "And I thought you would be happier if you were perfectly free—to choose again."

"And I have chosen again!" cried Geoffrey, folding her in his arms. "I have chosen again—and it is for the last time, and, Alice, my choice is you!"

Amendment to the Constitution.

HOUSE AMENDMENT TO HOUSE BILL, No. 217.

Strike out all of the bill after the word "State" in the third line of Section 1 of the bill and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"First. That all of Section 3 of Article 9 of the Constitution of this State after the word 'Corporation,' where it occurs the second time in Section 3, be stricken out."

Section 2. That Section 6 of said Article 9 be stricken out and in lieu thereof substitute and adopt the following, viz.:

Section 6. Shares of the capital stock of corporations created under the laws of this State, when owned by persons or corporations without this State, shall not be subject to taxation by any law now existing or hereafter to be made.

An Act proposing amendments to Article 9 of the Constitution of the State of Delaware concerning Corporations.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Delaware in General Assembly met (two-thirds of the members elected to each House agreeing):

Section 1. That the following amendments be and the same are hereby proposed to Article 9 of the Constitution of this State:

First. That all of Section 3 of Article 9 of the Constitution of this State be stricken out and in lieu thereof substitute and adopt the following, viz.:

"Section 3. Shares of capital stock of Corporations created under the laws of this State, when owned by persons not residing herein, shall not be subject to taxation by any law now existing or hereafter enacted."

Second. That all of Section 6 of Article 9 of the Constitution of this State be stricken out.

Approved March 9, A. D. 1901.

I, Caleb R. Layton, Secretary of State of the State of Delaware, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true and correct copy of House Bill No. 217 with Amendments thereto, entitled "An Act proposing amendments to Article 9 of the Constitution of the State of Delaware concerning corporations," as the same appears on the enrolled bill filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and approved by the Governor March 9, A. D. 1901; and published in accordance with the requirement of the Constitution of this State.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and official seal, at Dover, this fifteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and two.

CALEB R. LAYTON,
Secretary of State.
